Foreword

Talofa lava, Malo e lelei, Ni sa bula vinaka, Kia orana, Taloha ni, Faka'alofa lahi atu, Kam na mauri, Gud de tru, Kaselehliā, Halo olgeta, Ia orana, Aloha mai e, Kia ora and Warm Pacific Greetings.

Early detection of cancer can save lives. With early detection there is a very good chance of receiving timely treatment and making a full recovery.

I encourage all Pacific Island people to have regular checks and to learn how to detect and prevent cancer. It's important to our families that we give ourselves the best chance to fight.

How this booklet happened

This Samoan translation and adaption of the Cancer Society's Breast Cancer booklet came about because of a need to reach Pacific women with breast cancer and their families. The aim was to provide information on breast cancer treatment and how others coped.

The idea of a Samoan translation of the Breast Cancer booklet by the Cancer Society of New Zealand was well supported by a prominent Samoan breast cancer survivor. The women of the Wellington Central branch of P.A.C.I.F.I.C.A took on the task of starting and funding this work, and making it possible for Samoan women with breast cancer to share their stories and experiences in Samoan.

In New Zealand, breast cancer is one of the leading causes of cancer registration in women. Pacific women in New Zealand are more likely to die of breast cancer than women of other ethnicities. Early detection and treatment of breast cancer can significantly increase the chance of cure.

This booklet explains what breast cancer is and how it is treated. It also explains that traditional healing or Samoan fofu can often complement hospital treatments.

The translation for this booklet was carried out by two Samoan health professionals who strived to simplify and aid the understanding of "Palagi" cancer concepts whilst preserving the meaning and character of the Samoan language.

Introduction

This booklet has been prepared to provide you with information on cancer of the breast. It gives information about diagnosis, treatment, practical support and the emotional impact of cancer.

In the past, breast cancer surgery was quite extensive and women feared not only the disease but also the treatment. Today, with early detection methods and the trend towards smaller operations, breast cancer can be treated successfully with better cosmetic results.

We can't advise about the best treatment for you personally. You need to discuss this with your own doctors who are familiar with your full medical history. However, we hope this information will answer some of your questions and help you think about the questions you may want to ask your doctors.

If you find this booklet helpful, you may like to pass it on to your family and friends who might also find it useful.

Your breasts

Your breasts are designed to make milk after pregnancy. The breast tissue extends almost to the collar bone at the top and to the armpit at the side. Lying beneath the breasts are the chest muscles and ribs.

Breast tissue is made up of milk glands, connective tissue and fat. The milk glands consist of milk sacs (lobules) where milk is made, and ducts which take the milk to the nipple.

In your breast area and armpit there are lymph glands or nodes which are connected by a system of lymph ducts. These glands and ducts are part of the lymphatic system, which helps your body to fight infection.

Your breasts do not stay the same throughout your adult life. Your monthly period, pregnancy, age and weight changes can all alter their shape. Some women find their breasts feel more tender and lumpy before their period. This tenderness and lumpiness disappears after the period ends. This is quite normal.

What is breast cancer?

Breast cancer is a malignant tumour that starts in the breast tissue. The majority of breast cancers begin in the milk ducts (ductal cancers). A small number start in the milk sacs or lobules (lobular cancers). Within these two groups there are different subtypes of breast cancer. Some grow very slowly. Others develop more rapidly.

Breast cancer can spread to the lymph glands and to other parts of the body, such as the bones and liver.

Diagnosis

Signs and symptoms

Breasts undergo changes throughout a woman's life, particularly the normal changes experienced during the menstrual cycle. Some breast changes may be early signs of breast cancer, including:

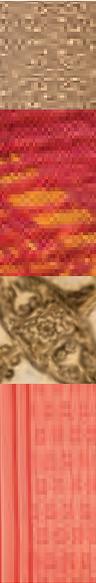

- a lump or lumpiness
- thickening of the tissue
- nipple changes, for example, a blood-stained discharge from one nipple, an inverted nipple (unless the nipple has always been turned in), and a rash on one nipple.
- skin dimpling
- a change in shape
- a painful area
- a rash or red marks which appear only on the breast.

Although these changes do not necessarily mean you have breast cancer, any breast change should be checked by a doctor. If you have a change in your breast, you may have several tests. Your general practitioner may arrange these tests or you may be referred directly to a breast specialist.

Biopsy

Often a biopsy will be necessary. A biopsy is the removal of a sample of a lump or the entire lump for examination under a microscope. Staging the breast cancer will show how far it has spread. The complete results from the biopsy and any further tests will help to determine the best treatment for you. With this information your doctors will know if you have an early breast cancer, locally advanced breast cancer or metastatic (secondary) breast cancer.

Treatment

Breast cancer is treated by several different methods: surgery, radiation treatment, chemotherapy, and hormone treatment. The treatment choice, using just one treatment or a combination of them, depends upon:

- the actual breast cancer: its type, grade, size, and whether or not it has spread (stage of the cancer)
- the individual woman: her age, general health and personal choice.

Surgery

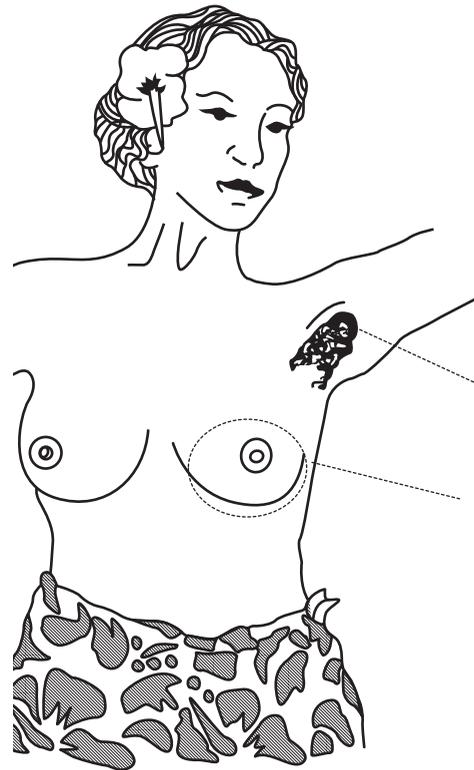

The first treatment for breast cancer is usually surgery. This includes surgery on the breast and, for most women, on the glands in the armpit (the axillary lymph nodes). Examination of the cancer and the lymph glands by the pathologist will indicate whether further treatment should be considered after the surgery.

Sentinel node biopsy

A sentinel node biopsy locates the first lymph node(s) that drains from the area where the breast cancer developed.

When cancer cells are found in the sentinel node more surgery will be needed.

Radiation treatment

This is the use of radiation (rays of energy called photons or little particles called electrons) to destroy cancer cells, usually using a machine called a Linear Accelerator. You will see a radiation oncologist who will discuss this treatment with you.

Treatment is carefully planned to reduce any effect on normal cells. This usually requires a visit for a simulation or planning CT scan to work out the position you will lie in for treatment, and to plan your treatment on a computer.

Treatment is given four to five days a week over about four to five weeks. It is painless and only takes a few minutes for each treatment.

Radiation may also be used for the treatment of recurrence or cancers that cannot be removed, either in the area of the breast or in other parts of the breast. The aim is to try and control the disease or reduce symptoms. This usually requires fewer visits.

Chemotherapy

This is the treatment of cancer by drugs. The aim is to destroy cancer cells while having the least possible effect on normal cells. The drugs are usually given intravenously via a drip and, therefore, circulate around the body. Chemotherapy is a systemic treatment (treating the whole body) compared with surgery and radiation treatment, which are local treatments to a specific area in the body (breast, chestwall, axilla etc).

There are different regimens or combinations of drugs used in breast cancer. Most will contain an anthracycline drug, for example doxorubicin (Adriamycin), and if there is a greater risk of spread and, therefore, greater benefit from chemotherapy, taxanes, for example paclitaxel (Taxol) may be used. Treatment is often in cycles at three-weekly intervals, and will last for several months. A medical oncologist will discuss all aspects of the treatment with you.

Side effects of chemotherapy

Chemotherapy side effects vary according to the particular drugs used.

When adjuvant chemotherapy is given to women with breast cancer, side effects may include:

- Risks of infections—the drugs can lower your ability to fight infections.

If you are feverish (your temperature is 38 degrees C or more), or if you feel unwell in any way—don't wait to see what happens—take action immediately. Contact your cancer doctor or nurse, and follow the advice given.

- Temporary hair loss. If you have temporary hair loss you are entitled to a benefit to buy a wig.
- Sore mouth.
- Tiredness.

Your periods may become irregular or stop. Avoid pregnancy during treatment. You should use a reliable contraceptive, such as a diaphragm or condom, during treatment.

Hormone treatments

Many breast cancers appear to be influenced by the female hormones, oestrogen and progesterone. Pre-menopausal women may be offered tamoxifen, a hormone treatment taken as a tablet. They may also have menopause induced to stop their own production of hormones. This can be done by four-weekly injections with goserelin (Zoladex) or by surgical removal (laparoscopic oophorectomy) of the ovaries. Once you stop taking goserelin your periods will usually return. Post-menopausal women may be offered oral hormone treatments—either tamoxifen or aromatase inhibitors, such as anastrozole (Arimidex), letrozole (Femara) or exemestane (Aromasin), which reduce the production of hormones in the body (other than from the ovaries).

Making decisions about treatment

Sometimes it is difficult to make decisions about what is the right treatment for you. You may feel that everything is happening so fast that you do not have time to think things through. However, it is important not to be rushed into a decision. It must be the right one for you.

Talking with doctors

You may want to see your doctor a few times before making a final decision on treatment. It is often difficult to take everything in, and you may need to ask the same questions more than once. You always have the right to find out what a suggested treatment means for you, and the right to accept or refuse it. Before you see the doctor, it may help to write down your questions. There is a list of questions at the end of this booklet, which may help you.

Taking notes during the session can also help

You may find it helpful to take a family member or friend with you, to take part in the discussion, take notes, or simply listen. Some people find it is helpful to record the discussion. Make sure you understand the reasons for your doctor's advice. Ask for a second opinion if you want one.

Talatalanoa ma i si tagata

A maea ona oulua talanoa ma lau fomai i ituaiga togafitiga e ono talafeagai mo oe, e lelei pe a e talatalanoa ma nisi o ou aiga, o au uo, o tausimai, fomai a le aiga, o lau faifeau, Sosaiete a le Kanesa poo se tasi foi ua maua muamua i le mai o le kanesa, pe a e lagona e talafeagai lea mo oe.

Talking with others

Once you have discussed treatment options with your doctor, you may want to talk them over with someone else, such as family or friends; specialist nurses; your family doctor; the Cancer Society; the hospital social worker or chaplain; your own religious or spiritual adviser; or another person who has had an experience of breast cancer.

I le maea ai o togafitiga

Ina ua uma togafitiga, e filifili lau fomai i taimi e te toe asiasi mai ai aua le fa'aauauina o au siaki. O le a fa'aititia taimi o nei siaki ma asiasiga pe a leai nisi fa'afitauli e toe feagai ma oe, pe ua solosolo lelei foi tulaga uma.

After treatment

After treatment, your doctor will decide how often you will need check-ups. Check-ups will gradually become less frequent if you have no further problems.

Follow-up care

Most women with early breast cancer are successfully treated by surgery and/or radiation treatment, often combined with chemotherapy or hormone treatment. Following treatment, you will find your energy will gradually come back. You may need to have extra rest for a while. Increase your exercise and general activities as you feel able. Research has shown that regular exercise during and after treatment is beneficial. The majority of women find they can do most things within a few weeks of surgery.

E taua ai le fa'aeteete mai le leua po'o le sao o se siama i le lima na taoto, ina ia aua ne'i tula'i mai nei tulaga.

Arm care

Following your surgery, your physiotherapist or breast care nurse will give you exercises to help to regain the full use of your arm. You may be concerned that your arm will swell after your lymph glands have been removed. This is much less common today because of the better methods of surgery and radiation treatment. However, a few women will still develop problems with arm swelling (called lymphoedema). To reduce the risk of this happening, you should try to avoid injury or infection to your arm or hand.

Emotional support

Women react in different ways when they learn they have breast cancer. Feelings can be muddled and change quickly. This is quite normal and there is no right or wrong way to feel. Breast cancer and its modern treatment is a huge life journey. Talking about how you are feeling with your surgical or oncology team, or your family and friends can help. For details of additional support services, such as support groups or counselling, phone the information nurses at the Cancer Information Helpline on 0800 CANCER (226 237).

What can I do to help myself?

Many people feel that there is nothing they can do when they are told they have cancer. They feel out of control and helpless for a while. However, there are practical ways you can help yourself.

Diet and food safety

A balanced and nutritious diet will help to keep you as well as possible and cope with any side effects of treatment. Food safety is of special concern to cancer patients, especially during treatment, which may suppress immune function. The Cancer Society has published a booklet Eating Well/Kia Pai te Kai: A guide for eating well during treatment. This booklet can be obtained via the web address or 0800 number at the end of this booklet.

Exercise

Many people find regular exercise helps recovery. Research has indicated that people who remain active cope better with their treatment. The problem is that while too much exercise is tiring, too little exercise can also make you tired. Therefore, it is important to find your own level. Discuss with your doctor or nurse what is best for you.

Traditional healing

Traditional Samoan healers use a 'holistic' way of treating illness using a variety of massage treatments (fofu), counselling techniques and herbal preparations (Vai laau Fa'aSamoa). Holistic health involves seeing the person as a 'whole being' including their spiritual, physical, mental and family aspects.

Some people use traditional healing along side medical treatment recommended by your hospital doctors. However, we strongly advise that you must not miss the treatment given by your cancer specialists.

If you are using traditional healing it is important to tell your doctors about the treatments you are using.

Relationships and Sexuality

The anxiety and/or depression felt by some women after diagnosis or treatment can affect their sexual desire. Sometimes women feel that they are less sexually attractive. Tiredness following an anaesthetic, major surgery, radiation treatment or chemotherapy will also reduce sexual desire. Talk to someone you trust if you are experiencing ongoing problems with sexual relationships. Friends, family members, nurses or your doctor may be able to help. Your Cancer Society can provide information about counsellors who specialise in this area. The Cancer Society has published a booklet Sexuality and Cancer/Hōkakatanga me te Mate Pukupuku: A guide for people with cancer and their partners. This booklet can be obtained via the web address or 0800 number at the end of this booklet.

Luamanuvao's Survivor Story

In June 2007, Luamanuvao Winnie Laban was diagnosed with breast cancer during a routine check. Her story is one of many brave Samoan women who have journeyed the narrow road of surviving cancer. Luamanuvao was with her husband, Dr Peter Swain, when they were told by oncologist, Dr Burton King, that they had found a tumour in her left breast. The tumour was quite close to her lung which meant it was serious and that they would look for a course of action to deal with it.

“I went with my husband, and to be honest, when I was first told, I actually didn't hear it. Part of the shock is that you don't hear. And part of not hearing is that you can't believe that this is true” says Luamanuvao.

Dr King, along with medical oncologist, Dr Andy Simpson and radiation oncologist, Jamie Evans worked with Luamanuvao and Peter on a plan to move forward. She was to do six months of chemotherapy and radiation, and surgery to remove her breast (mastectomy).

“My husband took it all in; he listened very carefully to what was being said. I went home and, naturally, my reaction was I cried. Then I realised that I've got to come to terms with it, that I've got cancer and that I actually need to work out what I've got to do next.” Once recognising what course of action to take for her health, Luamanuvao and Peter then set out to let their close knit family know, starting with her brother Fauono Ken and his family and all of our children.

However, Luamanuvao's greatest concern was her mother Emi, as she was old and wasn't keeping good health. When she was told, she never showed her tears in front of her daughter but she was quite often heard saying to others, Why should her daughter go through this? And that she'd rather go through it than her daughter.

“She was always strong for me, always caring, never too intrusive and always a source of strength for me,” Luamanuvao says affectionately about her mother.

As a Samoan woman, Luamanuvao's crowning glory and trademark was her long hair and one of the ways that Luamanuvao was able to help prepare her family (and extended family) was to cut her hair short before her treatment. This was a very significant part of the preparation process.

She says, “The cutting of the hair was a way to prepare the family. It was taking control. For Pacific women, their hair is their glory. Long hair is part of who you are and to go and get it cut was quite emotional for me.”

Luamanuvao has kept her long hair in a drawer at home. When her hair started to fall out during chemotherapy her husband Peter then shaved her head. The essence of the engagement of her husband and family in her journey has been a significant part of her healing.

At the time of Luamanuvao's diagnosis, she was preparing for election the following year. Although it was a challenging time, she never wavered in her determination to survive the cancer and the election. Both of which she did successfully.

Luamanuvao says it is important for Samoan women to use their natural communication strength. Women are very good at communicating with each other and sharing experiences. The respect for authority in the Samoan culture can sometimes hinder but talking about treatment and its side effects helps give confidence for others to ask questions and to talk.

Faith and culture also plays a strong part in our Samoan community to which Luamanuvao says,

“We have a strong faith, and our love for family. We believe in a loving God, and we are never alone. We can talk to God, and talk to our ancestors, our family. They are always with us.”

Interview with Anne Tuliakiono (Breast Cancer Survivor)

Interviewer: What was your response or how did you react when the doctor told you that you had cancer?

Anne: I was quite shocked, mainly because I wasn't expecting it. Everyone keeps you thinking that it's going to be quite positive, and he (the doctor) hadn't done my tissue sample. But he looked at my mammogram, and he said to me "Oh I can tell you now that you are most likely to have cancer." So I just started to cry. That's how he told me I had cancer.

Obviously, you are still having a difficult time.

Only when you asked me, because that's how I remember it, the first time, on the first day.

What made you go to the doctor?

I didn't realise I had a lump over my breast, just under my armpit and I didn't think much of it. It was my husband who found the lump. I went to my GP to get some tablets and they referred me to a specialist. I think it was in October, then I had to wait for the specialist to get my mammogram and ultrasound done.

Yeah, that's why I went to the GP. I didn't think anything of the lump. I thought I had a cyst.

You have had some treatments?

I've had all my treatments now.

What was the biggest challenge of the treatments that you have experienced?

I think the chemotherapy. I had a mastectomy in December; I think I had to wait until March to have chemotherapy. That was the biggest challenge for me because it [chemotherapy] made me feel sick all the time, so I didn't like it.

Where did you get the support?

Mainly from my family and I would go to the Cancer Society. But my family was my biggest support. I had some support from work as well, because I took time off during my chemotherapy.

During those treatments, what sort of things kept you going?

I always had support that kept me going, some days I would get shitty, because I was over the treatments. Because I have kids too, that kept me going.

What kept you alive?

My kids: 10 and 8 years-old, my husband and my family.

How did your family react when they were told you've got cancer?

My mother didn't take it very well. I think because she thought I was going to die, so that was her first reaction. But my kids were really good when I told them. They understood.

And your husband?

I think he was in shock as well, because everyone, when you get told that you have cancer, they think you're going to die straight off.

Did it have any impact on your relationship with your family, your husband?

It made my family life, because I'm close to my family anyway, it brought my family together and stronger.

Throughout the time when you were told you have cancer, during treatments, time off work, can you talk about some of your experiences.

It made me appreciate my life a bit better, and made me just be thankful for every day. That's the biggest thing for me. I've met so many amazing people, probably, worse off than me. I'm probably much luckier than them so I don't take anything for granted anymore.

Can you talk about the support you had? What was the most supportive thing done for you throughout this time?

People watching out for my children, because my kids are my biggest priority. My family stepped in and really helped out.

Was it your kids that really moved you and made you determined to have the treatments done?

Probably, because my sister has some friends who have breast cancer. She knew what to do and she was really helpful. I felt better because I had also researched everything too.

From a Husband and Father

When I first heard that Ngaire had cancer, it felt like I'd been K.O.'d by David Tua. While I was trying to be strong for Ngaire, it felt like my whole world had fallen apart. Then survival mode kicked in, and I started thinking and praying about what I could do to get our family through this.

In hindsight, one of the crucial things I had to do was to tell people, friends, family, and especially our employer. I found this really difficult, because I didn't want people to feel sorry for us, and Ngaire was the same, but overcoming that pride made things so much easier in the long run.

I don't think accepting help comes easily for most men, but people genuinely want to help, and you will genuinely need it. Think of it as doing them a favour, you would do the same for them.

I was really lucky that my employer was so understanding, as I needed a lot of time off to go to appointments and had to work from home often to look after our son if Ngaire needed to sleep. I also had to accept that there is no quick-fix, and it was going to be a long road.

My priorities would have to change for a while, it didn't matter if the lawns didn't get mowed, if I couldn't get on my bike or go out so much.

Pese a Solomona 2. 1- 4. (Bible)

Once I accepted that getting my family through this was my number one priority, and I would have to let a few things go, it became a lot easier.

It's not all bad news either, I got to spend a lot of time with my family, after each treatment, we'd go out for a coffee and we've had some great times together.

I was incredibly lucky that my wife is such a strong person and kept positive through it all, and that we had such strong and practical support from our families and friends.
